FIVE CORNERED FIGHT

HONOLULU POSTMASTERSHIP IN CENTER OF THE STAGE

FIVE CAPABLE MEN ARE OUT FOR THE PLACE AND EACH MAN HAS GOT GOOD SUPPORT.

With the active work of J. G. Pratt for the Honolulu postoffice the fight for this fine appointment has begun to focus around the less than half a dozen possibilities, with neither one of them a certainty by any means.

The active candidates seem to be confined to a list comprising J. M. Oat, the present incumbent; J. G. Pratt, now absent on the mainland; L. T. Kenake, the present Deputy Postmaster; Theo. F. Lansing and Clarence L. Crabbe. It has been currently reported that the last named candidate has withdrawn from the fight, though he could not be seen to confirm or deny the report. That Mr. Crabbe should withdraw with the backing he is known to have had for the place is hardly consistent with the rules of practical politics. It is well known that any other of the candidates would have counted the job clinched if they could add to whatever support they have the strength that was behind the recent President of the Senate and the successful chairman of the Republican Central Committee for two years.

J. G. Pratt is conceded to have a better swing in Washington than either of the other five. He knows the curves down there and has able friends scattered all about the capital. Postmaster Oat, Mr. Lansing and Mr. Kenake, as well as Messrs. Pratt and Crabbe, have their staunch backers in business circles here in Honolulu. These are making their respective wishes known to Governor Carter, Delegate Kuhio and to the influential ones in Washington.

Notwithstanding the reports from Washington, those next to the inside of the postoffice fight do not believe anyone has a clinch at this stage of the game.

The commission of Postmaster Oat expires in December or early in January.

After a hard day's work in an office it is refreshing to enter a cool home. Homes with "Arabic" on their roofs are always cool, for "Arabic" cools iron roofs fully 15 degrees.
